

LEADERSHIP MATTERS from Dr. Roger Yancey, Director of Missions

May 15-21 is set aside in the SBC for a Week of Prayer for Associational Missions. On occasion we have churches who want to participate in the TEBA or a church planter will who ask important questions such as "Why does denominational affiliation matter?" or "How does being part of a denomination positively impact the local church?". One of the best answers to these questions comes from George Bullard, of the Columbia Partnership (www.BullardJournal.org) in an article Bullard wrote in 2006 he addresses these questions as follows:

Why Does Your Congregation Want a Denominational Affiliation?

Does your congregation need a denomination? The short answer is "No." The long answer is that a denominational relationship is not essential to the vitality of your congregation. It is optional. The fastest growing denomination in North America is said to be non-denominational. If that is the case, then why are so many congregations affiliated with a denomination? Why are so many new congregations affiliated with denominations? Why are so many congregations who are disenchanted with their denomination choosing to affiliate with another denomination, including newly emerging denominations?

Perhaps a better question is, does your congregation want a denominational affiliation? The short answer is probably "Yes." The long answer is that a denominational relationship is perceived as essential by many congregations if they are to reach their full kingdom potential. It is indispensable. Probably the best question is, what is it about a denominational relationship that looks so attractive to your congregation? What real benefits are you looking for in a relationship with a denomination? Try these answers on for size.

First, congregations value a relationship with other congregations. Christianity is all about relationships. Relationships with God, one another, and the context in which the congregation serves are important. Congregational leaders like having a community of other leaders with whom they can regularly relate. It is helpful if these are leaders with whom they are not in competition, but collaboration. These relationships are particularly important to clergy who desire security in ministry.

Second, congregations value affiliation with a denomination where the denomination is on a GlobalLocal mission. They want to be part of a movement to fulfill their unique understanding of the Great Commission and Great Commandment. They see movement vs. institution as a clear distinction between denominations about which congregations are excited, and those about which they are passive. Institutionalized denominations are losing congregations and members. Movements are gaining.

Third, congregations want the sense of identity, heritage, and security they receive from being related to a denomination. This is no small factor for congregational leaders and members. Particularly for members 55 or more years old, these are critical issues for spirituality and identity. For younger members the specific denomination does not matter as much as the need for belonging to something about which they feel passionate. A sense of community is a high priority for them.

Fourth, congregations want resources offered by or interpreted by denominations. Certain resources may be directly offered or sold by denominations. Some may be brokered from various denominational and non-denominational sources. In other cases denominations may offer evaluations of or coaching for the use of resources available from various sources. The relevance of these resources to congregations in a diversity of settings is a critical issue for denominations to address.

Fifth, congregations want help in dealing with the challenges of ministry. Denominations offer assistance to congregations in trouble, or who are experiencing various challenges. Congregations want the voluntary or authoritative assistance their denominations can provide them. Clergy particularly desire help in the midst of tough ministry situations. Congregations also want the urging of their denomination to be involved in vital ministry. They want their denomination to model this by its own effectiveness.

Why does your congregation want a denominational affiliation? The key answer is that your congregational leaders must be clear on its answer to this question. It will increasingly be asked to answer this question by its younger members and potential members. Is your answer ready?

Web Site

Designs

Ideas to consider when planning to design or redesign a church web site

1. Choose a domain name that is easy to spell, easy to remember, and easy to present – easily understood when shared verbally.
2. Keep the domain name relatively short and related to the church or ministry.
3. Preferably use .org, not .com (.com is usually for commercial sites)

- ❖ Imagine yourself as the one browsing: Most people aren't seeking an online church experience –they are looking for a church that cares for them and their family. They desire a vital church experience that makes a difference in the community and individual lives. Try some testimonials on the homepage, telling the unchurched why people came to join your church?
- ❖ Don't misrepresent your church – your website should genuinely represent who you are and the culture your church is reaching. It also needs to be written to and for those to whom you expect to reach.
- ❖ Don't overdo the animations: Some church web masters need to read this quote - "... fancy media on websites typically fails user testing ..." Jakob Nielsen "Low-End Media for User Empowerment." One time is cute and catchy. More than that is distracting to the human senses.
- ❖ Avoid "Churchy" terminology: Make sure it is clear and understandable by ALL users.
- ❖ Avoid long introductions and verbose texts: "... brevity is the soul of wit," Shakespeare, from Hamlet. In research on how people read websites we found that 79% of test users always scan any new pages they came across; only 16% read word-by-word.

Solving most users' needs is as simple as asking the questions they are asking, and making the information easy to find and easy to read:

- Church denomination
- Location
- Days and times of services and programs
- What stuff do you have for kids
- Podcasts of sermons that reveal you're not "wacko" or a cult
- Smiling, inviting faces; use your people, not canned pictures
- Email contact (with an expected response time)
- Phone number (with optional numbers, if the church does not have an answering machine, or the office is unmanned during the week)

Sure, you'd think the above list is obvious ... but we have seen allot of the obvious omitted.

- ❖ Keep the site up-to-date: remove events and programs after the date has past. Keeping your website up-to-date should be as easy as 1-2-3.
- ❖ Avoid long download times: Some people still use dial-up or have slow connection speeds. Remember, people hate waiting!
- ❖ Use a contemporary site design: You don't have to be a computer tech or have a degree in computer programming. Aesthetically-pleasing site designs are available at:
  - <http://wordpress.org/>
  - http://welcome.webs.com/design/?referer=cpc\_gaw\_us-all-free-free-template\_ip&utm\_source=gaw&utm\_medium=cpc&utm\_term=free-template&utm\_content=ip&utm\_campaign=us-all-free&qclid=CPq4wpnHl6qCFrt7QodfV3qYw

  - <http://www.christiantemplatesonline.com/free-church-templates.asp>
  - <http://www.magictemplate.com/files/free-christian-church-website-templates.php>
- ❖ Keep it simple! Why make things complicated for your visitors? A simple menu on the left hand side or across the top is normal. If they can't quickly find what they are looking for, they likely will leave your site.

We hope and pray you find these tips useful in your quest to introduce your church to the online surfers.

Mission Info Wanted

One of the greatest strengths of TEBA is the commitment on the part of all of our member churches to be part of missions through the Cooperative Program.

Many of you also participate in mission endeavors in your community and in focused efforts both in the US and around the world.

To help us support those mission efforts we are asking you to help us get the word out to other churches that may be able to join you in this mission ministry.

You can go to www.teba.org to download the form "Mission Project/Trip Information for 2011" and return it to the TEBA office. (It's on the main page on the bottom left side-click "On Mission".)

We will compile all of the information together in a summary form and send it out to all of the TEBA churches.
