

Heather

this is my idea of what school is. It might be different from your thought, but here it is. To me, school is a place where kids and teens and young adults go to graduate, get their education so you can get a good job and go to college, to get your diploma. Why do kids skip school and blow it off? Maybe because they just don't give a shit. They don't realize the huge significance and importance of ~~actually~~ actually getting your diploma or GED. They would rather fuck off and waste their time, probably doing something they shouldn't be. Something like, smoking pot, doing drugs, getting drunk. Definitely something they shouldn't be doing. But, I don't think they really understand what it's doing to them. I didn't really give a shit in 9th and 8th grade. And now I really wish I woulda' done better in 9th grade. Now I have to put in twice as much school time so I can actually fuckin graduate. All the other kids skipping and ditching class now a days are probably pissed off at the world or at their parents for only wanting what's best for them, wanting them to go to school and graduate, so their kids can grow up and have made something out of ~~their~~ ~~themselves~~. themselves. that's why these kids decide to ~~not~~ refuse to go to school. they envy it. or maybe they get caught up in the "I'm cooler than you, I'm more popular" bullshit. they try so hard to fit in and be like everyone else rather than just doing what's best, even though it WILL be hard at times, yeah, ~~they're~~ there will be times where you just won't want to comply any more and just give up. No one said it would be easy. No one wants to be original anymore. they would rather smoke a cigarette than solve an equation. they don't want to try and do good, and get other people, like friends, to buckle down and earn their fuckin credits. seems like no one wants to do their best. or even try at all, anymore. Trust me, if I knew what was coming a year ago I would have listened to the ones who told me so. Now look who's cool.