PCLaw Version 10

Monday, August 03, 2009

Greetings!

This is an advisory letter regarding the release of PCLaw Version 10.

As you may or may not know, LexisNexis Practice Management released PCLaw Version 10 today, Monday, August 3, 2009. We were privileged to be a part of the BETA process of version 10 and reported issues that we found in the BETA product to LexisNexis development as they prepared the final release product.

On behalf of our clients, with ALL new software versions, we always test the newly released version on our live data before we recommend that any of our clients do so with their own live data. As of today, Monday, August 3, 2009, we have not yet even upgraded our own PCLaw books to run our final tests on our live data. Further, if you also use Amicus Attorney in conjunction with PCLaw, we also have not tested the link between the products and cannot confirm whether there are any issues with same. We hope to receive word from Gavel & Gown Software Inc. regarding the continued stability of the Amicus-PCLaw link within the next few business days. We will also test the link between PCLaw and Time Matters for our Time Matters clients.

Accordingly, although you may receive an email from LexisNexis with your product key to download and install PCLaw 10, please simply save this information in a safe place. PLEASE DO NOT INSTALL THE PCLAW 10 UPDATE JUST YET. We will notify you when we think it is appropriate to do so. We anticipate updating our own set of PCLaw books from version 9 to version 10 in the very near future and will work with, and actively test version 10 for approximately 7-10 days. If all goes well, we'll advise you to go forward with the upgrade shortly.

Thank you again for your continued trust and your business. Please call us if you have any questions, concerns or comments.

Respectfully Yours,

Debbie Foster, President
